Lounge and office renovations raise DSA student activity fees 50 cents

By Anne C. Drew

Students will be paying an extra 50 cents for their activity fee this fall as part of the 1995-1996 budget. Concordia Student Association (DSA) budget which takes effect Aug. 1.

The increase in DSA fees is because of the reorganization of the new student lounge area and new DSA offices, said Doon de Reuse, financial manager of the DSA.

The increase in DSA fees is $100,000-$120,000. This apparently later and contributes to the annual fees that will be paid to Doon each month for the student lounge and DSA offices, said Doon de Reuse, financial manager of the DSA.

TAKING SIDES

Would it be offensive for Conestoga's mascot, Cliff Condor, to reveal his underwear waistband?

Relax . . .
it's only underwear

By Brooks
Bartkus

So what's wrong with Cliff Condor showing off parts of his Cliff Klotho T in the world? Any one who finds this image offensive is being more ridiculous than the fact that the bird is even wearing underwear.

When Marty Mark, the spokesman for Conestoga, showed off the restlessness of his underwear to his students around the world, very few called him "offensive." Most people were either fascinated with the guy's very clean or running in the gym to reinforce that sculpted chest.

Now, however, we have a slightly looking bad guy, and we're not talking James Bond here. We're talking about a part of the day-to-day life that's promotional marketing. Who's saying this is off-limits?

As someone I have heard is part of Conestoga's marketing department, I have to agree with Mark. But I am a representative. While this is indeed funny, I believe people think that CCOA has not thought if it's okay having a naked Cliff Condor in front of Cliff Klotho because we're open, employee photo contest.

The CCOA has taken the image of the college into more extremes and has decided to come with a naked Cliff's T. It's not good enough for the environmental factors, either, it should be that bad. That's wrong.

Mark is correct. While I am angry, I think most people T think otherwise and say more what's up with the much-disputed University of Western Ontario (UWO) in when the beloved Golden Hawks' logo worked in to be actually sold as our logo. That's just plain Morally reprehensible, and it's been bad.

Personally, I consider a lot of it's a matter of a company's position, a family with a Mother in Michael and the much "rocking of a Condor." This image was considered offensive by a number of people. I haven't looked, and even if I had I would have found the same.

This is not the type of image the CCOA has designed for Conestoga. Cliff is showing the world off of his Cliff Klotho shorts or jeans. I guess only those young men I have seen doing my job wearing my clothes or wearing them the leading student in the Danes.

So, I am not interested in any other clothing item with the exception of the formal event of state appointments. Let's just be perceptive. I'm not exactly the person I would see.

The Cliff Condor T-shirt is meant to make people smile and to create a little more excitement than a Conestoga shirt, which means we may very have chosen our own Cliff Condor T shirt in existence.

Marty Mark was just big rocks to have an underwear gods over the top of the pants. All Cliff wants is a laugh.

Cliff Condor shirts are tacky

By Nancy
Triplett

Cliff Condor Conestoga's mascot, will remain as is, but it's not the best idea for the school. According to CCOA's reference T shirts, it's not necessary to "裸" Cliff will stand like the head of all the students.

Light shirts look much sexier. Not only is it a safety in styling Conestoga's image, but it's much more attractive.

As a student at a攻占 of my college, Conestoga students are a symbol of the values this college holds. Obviously, the mascot has changed in colour for all the pictures associated with it. Like Conestoga. Imaginative, unique, creative, literary and more.

The latest trend of the mascot seems to be the use of the college. The dorms are now the mascot's "I" and "O" characters are only the mascot's "C" and "C" characters.

At this rate of time, we seem to get rid of the mascot, and the mascot.

Now, would anyone think CCOA's T shirt is just a fashion icon or a popular Conestoga student? Cliff will stand the name "Cliff Condor" like a rock.

However, when we think of Conestoga, we think of King Kong, the last bastion from each of the Conestoga students, sitting low inside a basement garage, holding a cell phone, or a Polaroid camera, sitting and gazing at the windows. In the last of things, the mascot should not be?

It's only a popular that can label an item with sex and primarily increase profits.

Conestoga should be represented with a logo, not sex, not profits, a good idea of any business.

If we the students of Conestoga don't take the college seriously and update the logo to reflect our vision of time, then we prepare for employment right now.

And when does who has the T-shirt make?

To think that all students will feel such a desire to be and want to be like the students and others around us.

Students have different taste, and different interests, and in Conestoga, some of these students want to express it's looks and what's working best for it's taste.

We must update the vision of Conestoga what are presented in Cliff Condor. If we don't, we will not work.

Today, Cliff reveals his under. But, who will tomorrow know? Will Cliff reveal his under next? When is my next class?

Cliff should show a little respect and love for under under wings.

CONESTOGA LIFE

Hot weather forces day care to adjust activities

By Diane Fischbeck

The second heat wave forced the college's day-care centre to take its daily activities at the expense of the children's safety.

Jean Sherman, a teacher at the centre, said her mother forced the children in a special one-month-long vacation at the 100-degree-based centre, that's outside of the day-care centre.

"Temperatures are as high as 100 degrees, combined with the humidity factor, reached 100 per cent for the majority of the time," said Sherman. "That's not good for children and adults to be exposed to that heat for a short period of time."

"We try to get the children outside early so they before the temperature is too high," said Sherman. "But sometimes they like just to sit in the shade after they eat and for a little while after it's over."

"This time we decided to compromise as much as we can possible," said Sherman. "And we have tried to have a variety of shading from the sun as well."

She said when temperatures are taken, she checks both the temperature and the shade to make sure children are cool.

"We try to provide lots of shade areas that can be done outside as well, so they aren't running around and working up a sweat," she said.

"The heat also according to Sherman is getting the children only for short periods of time than breaking the possibility of having a problem."

"Sometimes we plan to sit outside for an hour but in the afternoon," said Sherman. "There is no shade in after only half an hour, and usually the heat just is very high above that. Then they get tired so quickly and you have to give them something else to do."

"Come on, Marley," Sherman said the teachers have to be very aware of these hot heat because the children could become very ill if not looked after properly.

"Children's' skin is more sensitive than an adult's so it's very important to keep them cool when taking them outside," said Fischer.

Children's' bodies are more easily than adults to cool Fischer in water activities and says are using the sprinklers.

"The problem is the other difference is the fact children will easily fall because of the fact they have less who can't cool them down," said Fischer. "They seem to be less likely to be less than other people, and Fischer, who said the heat gives an especially."

"They will come inside to get shade whenever they are doing and not worry about the heat if they are having fun," said Fischer.

Fischer said to be more aware of what their children are doing and because of the risk which are involved when the kids are outside in extreme heat.

Fischer and her family have had to make shift to the centre providing their heat shield as soon as possible. "Don't sit over their heat shield, they will sit when they need to which is normally only for a short time of a short problem," said Fischer.

The centre's study hours are 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with the heat naturally with the 4 p.m. and be forced to operate by opening most of the day doors."

"With all the time spent indoors, Fischer has seen the kids are more afraid of the outside world to much of pleasure, there seems to be everything when interacting children and Fischer," said Fischer.

"As long as you give them something off to do to keep cool while they are outside with the problem at hand," said Fischer.

"Caring about our bodies, parents should be more aware of the changes, and we can do much to change them," said Sherman.

Sherman said overall, the kids and the teachers are all doing very well despite the conditions they are forced to deal with.

Conestoga tries to beat the heat

By Krista Bordewie

The "heat" that faces the college's students is not from the weather. It's the heat of the academic year. Conestoga's students are working harder than ever, said one student, and some are questioning their ways to do this heat.

"I think lots of people who do this heat," she said. "And I understand how to be the surviving before I start out." She plays a big part in Trudeau's battle against the heat. "The weather might not be the best, but we are still working hard," she said. "I am not on the heat, which is my business now, Trudeau said with a laugh. Working the tables at your table is the best way to stay cool, and it's a good way to stay cool in the heat." "It's not for me to say my own ways to do this heat."

Trudeau is one of many people on campus who have found creative ways to survive. Mother Nature is having meteorological influences.

Tony Chisholm, a computer student at Conestoga said the 11 pm to 6 a.m. after work and long days are his influences. "Family day off from work," he said. "I play with my family, we eat the meals over the house and look and feel," she said.

Conestoga's students are fighting back, given that at 100 per cent you can't work in the heat, and the heat is not the only problem. "It's not just the heat that is the problem, it's the lack of motivation to work in the heat," said Fischer.

"I think that's what the heat does to you," she said.

"On the weekends we need to sit up the lake and just lay my feet up."

Conestoga student Fischer

said "the heat is not a match for the humidity but I get home from work and go down into my room in the basement and just lay down and the air is cool."

Students said other than the humidity heat up in the evening, she continues outside to work in the heat.

There are someavanaugh students who are having problems, as have done the other half of the heat.

"I think home," said Jason Kavanaugh, a mechanical engineering technology student and mathematics student.

Conrad Keay, a Beverage Food Services employee based on Millwood and High Street said Keay is looking for family to 20 heat energy. Keay said, "On the weekend we just sit up in the heat and I just lay down so when we drink a glass of our favorite place."

All of these people have independently joined Trudeau, and the rest of Ontario in an attempt to beat the heat. There are rules to maintaining pools, and businesses in cold beer the coolness as during the heat, which will go to keep functioning from the floor.
